

God's Faithfulness in the Storm

Acts 27:27-end

Sirs, I perceive that the voyage will be with injury and much loss, not only of the cargo and the ship, but also of our lives.

– Acts 27:10

But the centurion paid more attention to the pilot and to the owner of the ship than to what Paul said. And because the harbor was not suitable to spend the winter in, the majority decided to put out to sea from there, on the chance that somehow they could reach Phoenix, a harbor of Crete, facing both southwest and northwest, and spend the winter there. - Acts 27:11-12

But soon a tempestuous wind, called the northeaster, struck down from the land. - Acts 27:14

Since we were violently storm-tossed, they began the next day to jettison the cargo. And on the third day they threw the ship's tackle overboard with their own hands.

- Acts 27:18-19

When neither sun nor stars appeared for many days, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope of our being saved was at last abandoned. - Acts 27:20

HOPE

Men, you should have listened to me and not have set sail from Crete and incurred this injury and loss. - Acts 27:21b

For this very night there stood before me an angel of the God to whom I belong and whom I worship, and he said, 'Do not be afraid, Paul; you must stand before Caesar. And behold, God has granted you all those who sail with you.' - Acts 27:23-24

A handout image released by the South Korean Coast Guard on 28 April 2014, taken from cellphone video footage by a Coast Guard officer on 16 April 2014, shows Lee Joon-seok (R, the captain of the Sewol, fleeing from the sinking ferry near Jindo island, South Korea. EPA/South Korea Coast Guard)

As the ferry lurched to the side and capsized, a thin man wearing only a sweater and underpants ambled to the ship's edge. Waiting there was a rescue team. Then apparently without a moment's hesitation or a look back at the sinking boat that would soon claim hundreds of lives — many of them children — the man jumped into the arms of the rescue team. And was whisked to safety.

This moment when Captain Lee Joon-seok allegedly abandoned his ferry and hundreds of its passengers has come to symbolize an entire

When the storms of life come, know that God is with you. Choose to still be faithful. For God is at work.
